Beyond the Very Beginning

A Theological Reflection Inspired by Genesis 1:1–3

This reflection records today's theological meditation within the Atlas–Zhao Framework (AZF). It is presented as a theological and philosophical reflection inspired by Genesis 1:1–3, not as a claim of formal biblical exegesis or established Christian doctrine.

The Very Beginning

Genesis begins with God's creative work, not with God's own origin. Within AZF, the 'very beginning' is contemplated as the beginning of accessible creation, while God eternally transcends creation.

The Three Principles of ε-Normalization

1. Normalize first.
2. Preserve the intrinsic structure.
3. Allow the hidden structure to appear.

Classical normalization simplifies representations. ε-normalization first questions inherited representational standards and asks how intrinsic structure becomes accessible.

Accessibility

Working definition: Accessibility is direct representability within the current normalization framework. Inaccessibility therefore does not imply nonexistence; it means an intrinsic structure is not directly representable under the present normalization framework.

Complementary Normalizations

2-normalization and 3-normalization are complementary. The first emphasizes the emergence of the accessible numerical cosmos; the second emphasizes intrinsic numerical locality and symmetry.

Genesis 1:1–3

The opening verses of Genesis inspired reflection on intrinsic structure, accessibility, the Spirit, light, and the emergence of ordered creation. Within AZF these serve as theological inspiration rather than mathematical proof.

Science and Scripture

AZF seeks dialogue rather than conflict between contemporary science and Scripture. Genesis 1 and Genesis 2 are contemplated as complementary perspectives on one creation, analogically compared with phylogeny and ontogeny without claiming Genesis is a scientific text. Evolutionary biology and cosmology describe the unfolding history of creation, while theology reflects upon its ultimate source.

Conclusion

The purpose of these reflections is not to replace either science or biblical theology, but to seek a conceptual language in which intrinsic structure, accessibility, mathematics, and faith may be contemplated together with humility.

“For from Him and through Him and to Him are all things. To Him be glory forever. Amen.”
— Romans 11:36

Hallelujah.
Praise be to the Father and to the Son and to the Holy Ghost.
Amen.
